

ECONOMICS
(specialty 08.00.05)

Ulyanitskaya N.M. Development of subsidiary spaces of regional economic system

It is formulated the spatial changes in the economy of the region, the analysis of spatial processes. Particular attention is paid to the development of potential of the regional economic system. It is highlighted the characteristics of regional industrial structures taking into account the peculiarities of relations of economic entities in space and time, and the structural relations and their components in accordance with the level of economic activity and the functions performed. The questions of the formation of branch spaces, based on the stages of planning, establishment and development that ensures the functioning of the innovation vector to improve the region's economy are considered.

Key words: regional economic system, subsidiary spaces, regional potential, innovative vector of regional economy development.

South-Russian state university of economics and service

April, 15, 2012
