

PHILOSOPHY
(specialty 09.00.11)

Skvortsov I.P. On the united model of Russian social policy

The article deals with options for models of the social policy in contemporary Russia as well as conditions and prospects for their approval. The author considers that the state of the social culture of the Russian society and the scale of challenges to the social development create need for a model of social policy with regards to civilizational and sociocultural features of Russia. Such a model can and should be based on principles of solidarity and individual responsibility of the citizens, a significant social role of the state as well as on working together of different social groups and ethnicities, the people and the ruling elite.

Key words: sociality, solidarity, model of social policy, social culture, civilization.

Krasnodar state university of culture and arts

March, 2, 2012
