Leonov V.A. Russian education reform or something else?

Result of development of the Russian higher education in 1990s was that by quantity of students on 10000 population the country was rolled away from 5 place in the world on 26. It is shown that innovations lead to degradation of formation and, despite rough discussion of problems of educational reform, its purpose is indistinct: there is no backbone purpose – preparation of high-class professionals. The reduced variant of the American school education with USE allows Russia to spend less than means for one pupil. The USA spend per one student of university $16000 a year that for the Russian authorities is unacceptably. Attempt of connection of different education systems for the short period leads to falling of educational level, destroys developed structure. Realization of positions of the Bolonsky declaration is meanwhile impossible in Russia.

Key words: purpose of reforms, education system.
