

PSYCHOLOGY

specialty 19.00.01

Vasilenko D.A. Theoretical and methodological basis of hypnotic theories

The problem of personality's psychological health in terms of modern stressing social situation by means of a hypnotic trance providing is considered in the article. The necessity of unified conceptual construct definition and the problem of the hypnotic procedure structural components unity are discussed. The main approaches to instruments of hypnosis application as correctional techniques are analyzed. The comparative analysis of modern conceptions of hypnosis is provided. We are considering: theory of illuminative memory, dissociative and social- cognitive approaches to understanding of hypnosis, psychoanalytic theories and idea of hypnosis from the point of view of subject's adaptation possibilities. Hereby we also show the need of the uniform approach development based on the considered aspects of multiple genesis theories and modern possibilities of hypnosis. The perspective and experimental methods applied in the latest researches are covered. Possibility of general- psychological processes functioning specification by means of new natural-science methods is discussed.

Keywords: hypnosis theory, hypnotic trance, psychological health of the personality, psycho correctional impact, socialization.

Moscow state

university of M.V. Lomonosov

October, 14, 2012
