

SOCIAL SCIENCE

(specialty 22.00.08)

Valuiskova E.R. Money value as a regulator of family relations development

It is analyzed the value of money in modern family. Great importance is given to the issue of influence of material prosperity and wealth on family conflicts, relation to money in families in the socio-historical development, the transformation of money into the control of family relations and the value of money on the formation of warm and loving relations between family members, in this respect money act as a tool through which the dominance of the spouses, the ratio of money to families in the social and historical development take place.

Key words: money, regulatory role, value for money, material wealth, livelihoods, money culture, money relationships, family conflicts.

South-Russian state university of economics and service

November, 6, 2012
