Moustafaev F.M. Micro-structure of interpersonal communication within social and interpersonal relations

Community, social, interpersonal relations do not form a simple set and a complex social and philosophical, social and psychological integrity. It is shown how these relate with each other and each kind of relationship with intercourse. It is stressed the importance and specificity of subject-object communication. In society and in the workplace, it is an organized, coherent and socially educated character. It is highlighted and discussed some of the elements of the microstructure of interpersonal communication, the manifestations of communicative behavior. It is concluded that the microstructure of the problem of interpersonal communication can not be studied without a full disclosure of social and philosophical theories of human subjectivity.

Key words: interpersonal communication, community, social, interpersonal relationships, the microstructure of the communication process.
