Ivankov A.V. Antinomies of political and law life within law and political Russian self-identification

The problems of the Russian political and party pluralism are considered. Having analyzed the phenomenon of multi-party system, three positions can be pointed out. The first underlines that in today's Russia liberal political culture has already formed. The second brings the modern Russian political culture to various modifications of traditional authoritarianism. The third position refers Russia to fundamentally different of West civilization type where there is no "party". According to the author, this has generated a fundamental paradox of modern time: desanctification authorities did not lead to the rationalization policy.

Key words: pluralism, political and law life, party, political culture, liberalism, civilization, desacralization of politics, ideology.
