

PHILOSOPHY
(specialty 09.00.11)

Shumenko M.A. Migration problem in the context of various research schemes

The modern concept of migration is considered. From the viewpoint of law, migration is an important issue that has to be legal and requires legal registration. Modern European regulatory framework and based on it culture state the principle of compliance with international human rights standards fixed in the mix of international legal instruments. From the 1990s of the last century, there is an active debate among politicians and lawyers concerning the design of legislative documents in the field of migration policy of the Russian Federation. It is concluded that in modern Russian science there is no integrated approach to understanding the complex and contradictory in its effects of the migration process. Historical and cultural approach allows to consider migration as a historical and cultural phenomenon. There is an opportunity to develop joint programs of social support workers and development of constructive models of their integration into society.

Key words: migration, migration process, joint programs, social integration.

North-Caucasus scientific center of HS.

Southern federal university, Rostov-on-Don, Russia

December, 10, 2013
