

POLITICAL STUDY

T.A. Nikitina, E.I. Maksimenko

(Orenburg state university. Orenburg, Russia)

Civil society and alternative forms of social organization

The article covers a range of issues associated with the comprehension of some fundamental theoretical constructs of civil society organizations in the development of post-conditions. The characteristic of the influence of civil society and non-civil structures for institutional development of society is discussed. This is precisely the focus of research and leads to a closer understanding of the diversity of social solidarity and the social itself, beyond the concept of civil society and influence of the evolution of contemporary societies. The authors reveal the idea that the political evolution of many modern societies, which are in the process of post-communist transition, is determined not only by the weakness of civil society, but also by a common form of social organization of non -civil. If a developed civil society contributes to the success of democratization, the weakness of civil society, is the abundance of forms of non-civil nature in hindering the development of democratic institutions.

Key words: civil society, quasi-modern society, non-civil structure, structure of the simulation activities, institutional deformation.

October, 20, 2014