

LINGUISTICS

A.V. Orduli

(Kuban state university. Novorossiysk, Russia)

Semantic analysis of interjections in Russian language

Studying semantic parameters of interjections in Russian language it is compared and analyzed various classifications of interjections. The categories of emotive, imperative, cognitive, ceremonial interjection are regarded. Theoretical statements are supported by examples from classic literature. After analyzing the different classifications of interjections, we can conclude that in spite of an impressive body of research, this linguistic unit is of great interest. Due to the constant updating and new discharges interjections does not exist among scientists unity of views on the concept under consideration, therefore, the debate as to assume a particular word interjection or not, and to what category it continues to carry.

Key words: interjection, semantics, emotive interjections, imperative interjections, cognitive interjections, ceremonial interjections.

March, 19, 2016
