

PEDAGOGY

Z.S. Moustafaeva, R.V. Radzhabova

(Dagestan state pedagogical university, Makhachkala, Russia)

Continuous education – basic principle of teaching and upbringing of a personality

It is considered continuing education as a vital process that ensures the ongoing development of training and education of the individual, its main stages; it is grounded the need for new approaches to education, the interest in the idea of continuity in the context of historical and pedagogical analysis. The entry of Russia into the world single educational space is possible at creating a single system of continuous education, as a complex state educational institutions that provide organizational and substantive unity and continuity of the relationship of all parts of education, jointly coordinated and decisive task of education, secondary, polytechnic and training of a person.

Key words: personality, education, training, continuing education, educational concept, discrete, phenomenology, "lifelong learning", "learning society".

June, 19, 2016
