To the question of the differentiation of everyday vocabulary, professional lexis and terminological names

The problem of differentiation of everyday vocabulary, professional vocabulary and terminological names is considered. The study showed that professional knowledge is more detailed in comparison with everyday knowledge, and the detailing of professional discourse becomes possible due to professional and terminological vocabulary. The example of the French gastronomic sphere demonstrates the use of some common words and expressions in a meaning that differs from the everyday one. The author comes to the conclusion that the delimitation of professional and household names in the gastronomic sphere is possible only taking into account the corresponding sphere of their use.

Key words: professional discourse, professional vocabulary, everyday vocabulary, terms.
