

PHILOSOPHY

Andrey M. Roudenko

(Institute of service and entrepreneurship (branch). Don state technical university. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation)

Philosophical and anthropological specifics of self-determination connected with meaning of life and self-realization of the person in modern culture

The productive self-determination connected with meaning of life is connected with need of formation and cultivation as a result of training and education of the comprehensive personality having a clear understanding of subjectively significant purposes correlated to the most fundamental tendencies modern to him cultures. Besides, the correct understanding that there is life is necessary; continual installation in relation to own life; self-knowledge and knowledge of other person; correct understanding of borders, laws and opportunities of own freedom. The author believes that productive self-determination connected with meaning of life is in its turn a condition of productive self-realization of the personality as which condition productive creativity, undying love, visualization and systematization of results of the work and also ability to operate own vital energy and vital time acts.

Key words: meaning of life, self-determination, self-realization, love, creativity, life, culture, person, philosophical anthropology.

November 29, 2017
