Moral qualities of the university student of modern Russian army: specificity, status, development optimization

It is considered personal spiritual and moral qualities of cadets of military universities and areas of optimization based on the analysis of the influence of objective and subjective factors. It is studied the concept of "moral qualities", analyzed the objective and subjective factors, as well as the principals and contradictions of the formation of moral qualities of the personality of students of the Ministry of defense of the Russian Federation, formulated the directions of their development and optimization, limited by the activities of social institutions, military collectives, the personality of the management of this process. The author emphasizes that the all-Russian crisis situation in combination with the protracted process of reforming the army affected the Armed Forces. As a result, it is concluded that the organizational and staff activities in the Armed Forces, the implementation of some provisions of the new military doctrine, changes in the methods of recruitment of the Russian army lead to significant changes in the minds of soldiers. In order for these changes to be positive and enrich the content of the existing spiritual traditions of soldiers, it is necessary to use new forms and means of educational work, taking into account emerging innovations in society and the army environment

Key words: moral qualities, spiritual life, moral culture, spiritual traditions, spiritual security.
