

PHILOLOGY

Tatyana G. Kopaneva

(Don state technical university. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation)

Translation of legal documents as a separate type of special translation

Today the translation of legal documents, texts and the principles of the translation attracts great attention of scientists and researchers. The style of the right includes existence of specialized lexicon, which contains the extensive list of legal institutions and branches. During the translation of legal, legislative documents, it is important to place considerable emphasis on the available difference in the right and the legislation of many countries. It is also necessary to consider feature of the English and Russian translation and existence of the replaced words. The translator plays the major role. He has a problematic issue of adequate and correct transfer and broadcast of contents, sense of legal, legal documents during the translation from one language on perfect another. When translating, there is a need for translation transformations, namely lexical transformations. This is due to the fact that the legal language contains special vocabulary and has a special terminological content.

Key words: translation of contracts, right, translator, legal document, translation of documents, problems of the translation of legal documents.

February 12, 2019

---