

PHILOSOPHY

Valentina P. Maykova, Edward M. Molchan, Tatyana P. Pokrovskaya

(Mytishi branch of Moscow state technical university of N.E. Bauman. Mytishi, Russian Federation; Sergiyev Posad branch of Highest school of Folk Arts (academy). Sergiyev Posad, Russian Federation; Moscow state university of M.V. Lomonosov. Moscow, Russian Federation)

Spiritual and moral values as a phenomena of social systems

The value basis of social systems, genetic and historical development of the phenomenon of spiritual and moral values are investigated, their essence and characteristics are determined. The methodology of the research is interdisciplinary, historical and philosophical, axiological approaches and socio-philosophical analysis of the actual problems of social life. The attention is focused on the essence of spiritual and moral values that reveal the value basis of social systems and are a system-forming factor that unites the subjects of interaction in the development of social space. It is emphasized that the spiritual and moral values set the humanistic vector of development of the modern state structure along with consistency and structure. The authors come to the conclusion that the criteria indicators of spiritual and moral values determine the individual psychological changes in the structure of personality, its moral improvement, form the stability and integrity of social systems.

Key words: subjects of interaction, spiritual and moral values, socialization, society, social systems, social being, value basis, personality.

February 12, 2019