

PHILOSOPHY

Tatyana I. Arkova, Irina E. Khanturova

(Russian university of transport. Moscow, Russian Federation)

Spiritual and moral values of university education in dynamic conditions of modern Russian society

The article discusses external and internal factors affecting the dynamics of the spiritual and moral values of higher education in modern Russian society. Entry into the Bologna educational system is fraught with the absorption of traditional spiritual and moral values, wide expansion of Western pragmatism in all spheres of society. The necessity of a critical understanding of modernization processes in education and their coordination with traditional spiritual and moral values that have passed the test of time, contributing to the formation of a socially responsible, creative person with high moral and ethical qualities and focused on high professional competence growth is argued. Objective regularities of development characteristic of society and its structural elements, and in particular concerning higher education, its spiritual and moral values are given.

Key words: spiritual and moral values, competence-based approach, dynamics, globalization, Bologna educational system, values, university education.

April 9, 2019
