Subject-personal approach as a methodological basis for training future economists for continuous education

It is considered the importance of continuing self-education for future economists. Continuing education is analyzed as a means of comprehensive self-development of the human personality, which determines individual and social progress. Subject-personality approach is substantiated as a methodological basis of the process of self-education. The emphasis is made on the development of personality subjectivity in the learning process.

Key words: education, self-education, personality, subject, educational activity, motivation, methodological approach.
