

PHILOLOGY

Svetlana I. Kholodionova

(Krasnodar branch of Russian University of Economics of G. V. Plekhanov. Krasnodar, Russian Federation)

Category of emotionality in a word structure: differentiation of notion "emotionality", "evaluativity", "expressivity", "affectability" in Russian

Study of language emotionality has a long story, in XIX century it is clear that any language activity of person is subjective. This subjective is expressed by connotative, additional, associate-imaginative sense. Nowadays regardless to wide researches not only connotative content in common, but its components: emotionality, evaluativity, expressivity, affectability in several researches this terms continually used as synonymic. It is considered full and strict differentiation of its components, qualification of its definition, forms and method of its expression as a part of lexical unit of Russian language. Emotional function is leading along with the main – communicative – and represented important mean of expression the inner man of person. Study of connotative content of word and its components has a proof from the point of view that emotional component lets more strict or full define the lexical unit, helps to interpret lexical unit itself, and wider the text.

Key words: word, rank, connotation, emotionality, evaluativity, expressivity, affectability.

November 20, 2019

---