

PEDAGOGY

Andrey V. Vlasov, Evgeniya N. Mironova, Igor P. Makeenko

(Krasnodar University of the Russian Ministry of Inner Affairs (Stavropol branch). Stavropol, Russian Federation; Technological Service Institute (branch). Don State Technical University. Stavropol, Russian Federation)

Formation of moral relations in the pedagogical process

Moral relations are one of the kinds of ideological relations that, unlike material ones, pass through the consciousness of people before they develop. On this basis, moral relations can be defined as the practical realization in the actions of people of norms and rules of conduct arising from laws and principles of morality, as the value nature of the interrelationships established between people in the process of their joint social activity. The specifics of moral relations in pedagogical activity are that they manifest a causal relationship, in which the actions of one group of persons cause others to react in a normative and assessment way.

Key words: personality, individual, consciousness, society, morality, ideological and moral values, pedagogical activity, pedagogical influence.

January 28, 2020
