The role of sport policy in the spiritual life of modern society

The article considers general provisions regarding the relationship and mutual influence of politics and sport, examines the special role of sport policy in the spiritual life of modern society. Sport policy is the object, and its manifestations in Russian society – the subject of consideration. It is noted that the use of sports can be considered as a powerful lever of influence on the socio-political life of Russian society. The methodological basis is the axiological analysis of the manifestation of various forms of sport policy in Russian society. It is concluded that by harmoniously combining sport and politics, it is possible to improve the spiritual life of society by smoothing out destructive formations forming common value orientations.
