Moral discourse of the nation and nationalism in the horizon of the liberal paradigm of the political

The economic paradigm of the political, dominating as «liberal metaphysics» in modern Western social and political philosophy, necessarily presupposes the reduction of «political communities» to the area of their «moral justification». The consistent presentation of the nation as a «categorical community» – an intergenerational community constituted by «mutual concern / social friendship», gaining stability in politicization in the conditions of the existence of a European territorial state of a sovereign people and democratic legitimization of power, carried out by B. Yak, is the moral discourse of the nation and the national horizon of the liberal paradigm of politics as management.

Key words: nation, national, sovereignty, people, politics, «categorical community».
