

PHILOLOGY

Petimat Kh. Almurzaeva, Alyat V. Khadzhimuradova

(Chechen State University. Grozny, Russian Federation)

Some phraseological units of the German language, describing the character of a man

Phraseological units, in contrast to words, are special units in the structure of the language. The centuries-old history of peoples, culture, way of life and traditions are fixed in them. Each nation manifests in phraseological units its unique character, intelligence, cultural identity, wisdom and creates its own value picture of the world. The character traits of people are varied, and phraseology is also varied. The analysis of the national character of the Germans is carried out. In addition to common features, each federal state has its own characteristics, due to its territorial position and history. The article examines some of the semantic features of the phraseological units of the German language in comparison with Russian, describing the character of a person.

Key words: phraseological unit, phraseological units, phraseological turns, character, peculiarity.

November 16, 2020
