

PHILOLOGY

Natalya B. Boeva–Omelechko, Kirill P. Posternyak

(Southern federal university. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation; Rostov medical college, Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation)

National-cultural specifics of phraseological units with an ethnonym component in modern English and Russian

The relevance of this work is due to the interest of scientists in the problem of studying ethnostereotypes, which is necessary for forecasting and preventing intercultural conflicts. The purpose of the work is to conduct a contrastive analysis of phraseological units of English and Russian languages in order to identify their national and cultural specifics, and, ultimately, the peculiarities of ideas about other ethnoses reflected in these phraseological units. The paper identifies the ethnostereotypes, that have developed in relation to various peoples in English and Russian linguistic cultures, and attempts to describe extralinguistic factors that influenced the formation of these stereotypes.

Key words: ethnonym, phraseology, ethnostereotype, intercultural conflict.

January 19, 2022
