

PEDAGOGY

Ekaterina V. Pikalova

(Voronezh Institute of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Russia, Voronezh, Russian Federation)

Influence of digital technologies on the formation of communicative competence in teaching Russian as a foreign language

The features of the trajectory of the development of communicative competence in the preparation of Russian as a foreign language in the process of informatization of the modern education system are considered. The content and structure of communicative competence are analyzed, its basic components are identified, and the main stages of the transformation of communicative competence in state educational standards are described. Conclusions are drawn about the conceptual impact of digital technologies on the training of students, the features and prospects for the transformation of communicative competence when transferring education to a distance form are outlined, the main approaches used to understanding communicative competence in the context of global digitalization of the educational system are highlighted.

Key words: communicative competence, online learning, state educational standard, Russian as a foreign language, digitalization.

November 15, 2022
