Standards of conduct in training and education

A number of psychologists claim that the source of emotions is the physiological state of a person, and not his/her subsidiary activity. Therefore, it is impossible to order yourself to feel, but you can put yourself in the position of a student (at least relatively), you can also look at the student as an equal with yourself in the experiences of a person. The excitement of the student can and should be transmitted to the teacher, he/she must show emotional perception. This excitement will arouse interest and give the speech the necessary tone. According to the authors, the teacher should be able to use various situations in such a way that the tone and manner of addressing students would be active, effective.

Key words: intonation, communication, pedagogical etiquette, consciousness, morality, moral ideals, culture.
