Methodological problems of teaching cultural studies

It is considered the problems of the methodology of the discipline "Culturology". In modern national higher education, a situation has clearly emerged when in recent years many textbooks and manuals on cultural studies have been published, the level of coverage of the material of which is quite diverse both in content and in the nature of presentation. In the conditions of Dagestan higher education, when culturology as a specialty is not taught for diploma, but exists only as an interdisciplinary subject, a number of topical methodological problems have emerged. It is emphasized that the theoretical and methodological problems in teaching this discipline are largely due to both the divergence of scientific traditions in Russia and other countries, and the presence of different directions and approaches within national cultural studies.
