Essence of social relations and problems in military-political work

It is considered the essence of social ties in military-political work, which can be represented as a complex set of relations and interactions that are developed between civil society, its institutions, the Armed Forces and the National Guard, whose personnel, having a special social status, is a segment of Russian society. Adhering to the traditional understanding of the unity of the army and the people, the authors focus on the scientifically based, conceptually formalized and normatively regulated use of social ties in military-political work in the Russian Guard. The authors actualized the problem – communications are non-systemic, and are poorly implemented for these purposes due to the lack of a unified scientific concept of military-civilian interaction, as well as the necessary regulatory support. It is proposed to replace the practice of disparate and non-systemic events with an undetermined effectiveness of impact, systemic work based on the development and adoption of the concept of interaction of the Russian Guard with civil society and all its positive institutions.

Key words: professional military-political work, civil society, National Guard, Armed Forces, social relations, servicemen.
