Integration trends in philosophical knowledge: an example of a linguistic turn

The linguistic turn allows us to focus on the role of language in modern society. It is necessary to take into account the diversity of other turns, while it is linguistic that mediates other, more modern trends, in particular, visual, discursive, cognitive turns. As a consequence, it is necessary to turn to the genesis of the development of ideas about the synthesis of cognitive and linguistic structures. Language is a factor of consciousness, at the same time a construct and a marker of the socio-cultural space. It is necessary to take into account the bodily experience and the factor of the environment in which the "speaking subject" is located. These and other accents, on the one hand, reflect the need for cooperation of different disciplines, on the other hand, they provide an opportunity for philosophical knowledge to occupy a system-forming position in this field.

Key words: language, linguistic turn, discourse, discursive turn, cognitive turn, text, speech, visual turn.
