Attribute functions in German text

It is considered the formation of the category of attributes on the basis of their subordinating connection with a noun, where attributes are also understood as members with the meaning of a qualitative or quantitative attribute of an object or another attribute, the attachment of which to the corresponding component represented by different parts of speech is not due to the valence needs of the latter. In the grammar of the German language, the initial assignment of all members subordinate to the noun to the category of attributes prevails.

Key words: attribute, pragmalinguistics, introductive-existential function, linguotextual, functional-grammatical.
