Virtualization of society in the space of modern culture

The article is devoted to the analysis of virtual reality and virtualization of society in the context of transformation processes. The gap between the real and the virtual not only continues to persist, but increases to ensure the functioning of society in an organized system. The risks of a virtual digital citizen, which are associated with the real existence of people, are emphasized. Virtualization of society, on the one hand, ensures the continuous connection of the social structure, and on the other hand destroys stable and stable social ties, prevents the performance of socially significant work and personal contribution to the common cause of society in the real world.

Key words: virtual reality, virtualization of society, modern culture.
