On the structural and semantic features of english customs terms functioning in the professional media space

The specifics of the functioning of English full-structured and abbreviated customs terms in the professional media space are determined. For the first time, abbreviated customs terms were subjected to structural, semantic and functional analysis based on the material of the English language. It is shown that the customs terms used in the professional media space are part of the economic and legal terminological systems, represented by multicomponent terms-phrases, as well as abbreviated customs terms. It is noted that the linguistic forms of the nomination of customs terms are in the process of formation and development.

Key words: terminological system of customs affairs, English-language customs discourse, structural types of abbreviated terms, abbreviations.
