

PHILOLOGY

Ludmila M. Zholos¹, Elena S. Kosareva

¹Southern Federal University, Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation; ²Rostov Law Institute of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Russian Federation. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation

Lexical, grammatical and stylistic features of sports discourse

This article is devoted to lexical, grammatical and stylistic features of sports discourse. Sports discourse, like any other discourse, inevitably touches and interacts with the discourse of mass information, because it is through it that information about sports is mostly disseminated. Thanks to mass media, millions or even billions of people are involved in sports communication. Sports discourse does not exist in its pure form, it is always a combination of two or more discourses. In this article, we focus specifically on sports journalism discourse, consider the features of Russian-language, English-language and German-language sports articles.

Key words: sports discourse, translation, translation transformations, reportage, lexical, grammatical and stylistic features, sports terminology.

February 10, 2024
