Methodological issues in studying the philosophy of culture

The methodological features of the study of the philosophy of culture as an interdisciplinary field of scientific knowledge are considered. It is shown that the main aspects of the philosophical study of culture within the framework of a systemic synergetic approach are the interdependence and interdependence of elements and subsystems, non-linearity and multifactorial development. This manifests itself through the study of culture as a system, on the one hand, and as a subsystem of the meta-system of being, on the other hand. The characteristics of these features of the study of the philosophy of culture are given.

Key words: culture, philosophy of culture, system approach, system-synergetic approach, methodology, cognition, system of being.
